OFFICIAL PAPER OF COUNTY.

THOSE PETITIONS.

Two petitions, numerously signed, and requesting that the "whiskey cases" be put over this term of court on account of keeping farmers away from Heir crops, were presented to Judge Talcott and the County Attorney, the first of the week. The counsel for the defense, while disclaiming any part in the petitions, or any desire that they be granted, made emborate and rather over-armest speeches, dwelling upon the entire propriety of such petitions, waxing red in the face over the "primary rights of man," the "haiwarks of liberty," the "importance of the agricultural interest," and ringing the old changes on the ready host of trite generalizations that come in so pat on such occasions. These fundamental principles of government seemed to appeal to the learned gentlemen with sudden and peculiar force. One might well have thought the foundations of government were tottering on the brink of ruin, and that these cloquent gentlemen felt called upon to throw themselves into the breach to prevent an immediate and disastrous downfall. There was in the speeches, we say, a flavor of impressiveness and an excess of zeal that was quite remarkable in entirely "disjinterested parties." But for their solemn assurance to the gontrary one could have been excused for thinking their clients really had some interest in the matter. After the flood-gates of faffy were temporarily slosed, the Court very properly said that he had no power to do any thing in the matter, if either party objected. The learned counsel thereupon impressively wanted it to be understood that if these petitions were not regarded, the responsibility must rest where it belonged—with the County Attorney, and not with them. It being put to the County Attorney whether or not he wished to proceed with the cases on that understanding, he responded promptly, "we do, most emphatically, your Honor"—which bit of plain Euglish, after the grautous excursions of the opposing counsel was refreshing. And we say most emphatically he was right. We acknowledge that THOSE PETITIONS. tions—good citizens, good images on those petitions—good citizens, good images on the period of the
